PREFACE.

The new edition of the BALTIMORE CITY DIRECTORY, for 1871, is presented herewith to the public, with the congratulations of the Publisher on the prospect before us. We regard our City as regularly progressing in population and in every department of improvement and industry.

In the issue of this work for 1860 the number of householders was stated as 53,025; the population then was estimated on the basis of four to each household, which yielded a total of 212,100; the census for that year reported the whole population as 212,418—a difference of 318—thus showing that the approximation attained by taking the above mode of estimate is accurate for all practical purposes. In 1864 the number of householders was 54,345, which multiplied by four would make the whole population 217,380. In 1867–8 the total of householders was 72,948, which quadrupled gave 291,792 as the aggregate of persons. Adopting the like mode of estimate, we state the number of householders in 1871 as 82,483, making the present population 329,932—being 46,557 more than is reported by the Police Commissioners, and 62,333 more than is reported by the United States Marshal. Twenty-five per cent. of the entire inhabitants is embraced in the Directory, and after making fair allowance for all errors, we venture to claim that accurately ascertained the total population of our city exceeds 300,000.

We advert again to the present defective and very objectionable mode of numbering our houses. The evils of the present system yearly become more glaring and more productive of confusion and embarrassment, and we reprint now from our preface to the last next preceding edition the comment then made and now repeated, because of the earnest desire felt by us and by many of our fellow-citizens for a remedy, such as is obvious, easily adopted, and which will be found efficacious now and for all time to come, let the number of our houses be never so greatly increased:

"We are yet behind some of our sister cities in our modes of designating places of abode and of business: the opening of new, and the extension and widening of old streets, aggravate the necessity, heretofore existing, for a more methodical, uniform and accurate method of numbering our houses. The process of preparing a Directory exhibits, glaringly, the defect alluded to; and, inasmuch as the work of renumbering must be resorted to, inevitably, the occasion is presented fairly for considering the most efficient mode of doing that work; experience establishes the superiority of the Decimal system above any other hitherto tried; and every consideration of expediency and convenience dictates an early resort to that system. The Consecutive plan involves ever recurring changes, which serves but to derange and confuse; and as time rolls on, and improvements multiply, that confusion becomes more obvious, more perplexing, and needlessly adds to the labors of the municipal authorities, as well as to the difficulty found by private individuals in exploring our streets. All our streets, Baltimore street not excepted, exhibit duplicate and triplicate numbers, and wanting numbers."

We respectfully tender our thanks to all classes of our fellow-citizens for their prompt and satisfactory responses on the call of our canvassers, thereby evincing a due and enhanced appreciation of the importance and utility of the work about which we were engaged.

Very Respectfully,

THE PUBLISHER.

JANUARY, 1871.

ENGINEERS,

HIGH AND LOW PRESSURE

Steam Heating Apparatus

FOR PUBLIC AND PRIVATE BUILDINGS.

Special attention given to Heating Factories by Exhaust Steam.

We are prepared to contract for warming and ventilating by STEAM, Public or Private buildings of any size or construction, either by DIRECT or INDIRECT radiation, high or low pressure.

By the first method, we place coils or radiators in the various rooms, and convey the steam to them through mains properly run and connected, the coils can be protected if required, with ornamental screens and marble top.

By the second method, the coils are placed in chambers in the basement and convey the heat through flues to the different rooms above. For return circulating heating work which is now adopted by nearly all the principal houses engaged in heating, our IMPROVED VERTICAL TUBE COIL is the best that has yet been tried, it works equally well with high or low pressure, without noise, and contains more heating surface in less space, besides being highly ornamental.

For buildings in which they have been successfully used, we refer to the following :
